As the wailing sax of Supertramp's Logical song echoed across moonlit hills in Nimbin, dancers young and old stomped and grooved to the end of the eighth Café Central.

Community support grows each year for this night of music, drama and good food served up lovingly by the good folk of Nimbin Central School.

history continues at Cawongla

Cawongla Playhouse's story is one with many chapters. From the early days when the pioneer parents set up a preschool here, to the present day.

From a time when only animals roamed the patch we now call preschool, to our first Australians, the Galibal people, who long called this area home.

We've had directors who have been here for three decades, and others just short of a year. Each and every one is part of a chapter in this little preschool's history.

And so we farewell Emily Driscoll, our educational director, and wish her all the best on her new journey and thank her for being a part of the story of this special place.

Cawongla Playhouse will be open for Term 3 on 24th July. Our opening hours are Tuesday to Thursday from 9am to 3pm. We take enrolments for children from 2.5 to 6 years. Playgroupers most welcome.

Nimbin Preschool mud kitchen fundraiser

Nimbin Preschool is planning to create an outdoor 'mud kitchen' in their veggie garden.

A mud kitchen is an outdoor pretend play cooking area and is perfect for messy sensory play. Children learn best when they are outdoors and are connected to their natural environment.

The children at Nimbin Preschool are very enthusiastic about the project and have had input into all stages of planning. This gives them a sense of ownership and appreciation for another creative outdoor play area.

They want to call it the 'Mud Café'. As it will be set in the veggie garden, there are opportunities for the children to develop a deeper understanding of the 'paddock to plate' concept.

"Nimbin Preschool has been overwhelmed with feedback from many locals who see the importance of this project as an integral part of early childhood learning and development," said Early Childhood Teacher Katie Pennant.

"The 'Mud Café' will be built with a sustainable, low-impact ethos by using locally recycled and reusable materials.'

This project can only come to fruition through fundraising efforts, and there is currently running a raffle with some wonderful prizes including a $100 Maha She voucher; one-hour Kahuna Massage with Chrissy; $50 Daley's Nursery voucher; one-year subscription to Lunch Lady magazine and more to be announced very soon via the Nimbin Preschool Facebook page.

To celebrate this project, you can purchase an afternoon tea of chai and cakes and raffle tickets on Friday, 6th July at the Nimbin Preschool from 3pm. There will be a lucky door prize of $150 of firewood.

If you would like more information about Nimbin Preschool or have other ways you would like to help this fundraising project, please contact the Nimbin Preschool on 02 6689-1203 or email: nimbinpreschool@ bigpond.com

Nature on display at Tuntable Preschool by Lisa Torpey

Today the children at Tuntable Falls Preschool went up to the Primary School Vegetable Garden and outdoor classroom for our weekly visit and program run by Nicola (our Environmental Teacher).

We start the session by checking our Preschool veggie beds, watering, weeding and planting. We pick what we need to add to our lunch meal.

The children love exploring the huge space filled with produce, seedling greenhouse, a sandpit, chickens, tadpole pond, compost piles, fairies, and a cosy open classroom full of changing wonders and books.

As we roamed around, I noticed a Praying Mantis sitting on the table. Pointing it out to the children, we watched carefully as it walked towards the edge. "I'm good at handling insects," said Ari. "I'll take menacing the bug, swaying back it to the bush to be safe." He did so very gently, then we went off to water our plants.

Leo was curious and went to look for the Mantis again. He called me. "It's going all the way up the tree, Lisa!" We watched it walk steadily up towards the top of the baby tree.

"Look, it's hunting the insect," Leo noticed. He pointed to a "Stink bug" that was at the top. "There is a little snail too that he wants to eat," he noticed.

By now, several children had come to watch. Everyone was still and quiet, anticipating what might happen next.

"It's creeping up on the bug," Juno

"It's going to grab it now," said Sofia, as the Praying Mantis arched its front legs back as if it would strike the bug. The children were captivated, frozen faces watching.

The Praying Mantis looked to be and forth towards its prey. "Uh oh," said Leo. "It's going to get it!"

Ari responded, "That's its food Leo, it has to have that insect for lunch."

"Oh... yes I know Ari, it's true that it needs to hunt insects," replied Leo.

Once the bug had been captured we all watched as it carried it on a different trail... across the side of the classroom bench. When it got to the outdoor wood, it stepped into a spiderweb.

"It's stuck," said Juno. "It could die!"

"The spider might eat it," reflected "That's nature," explained Ari. They all need to have food."

The children looked worried, watching and waiting while the Mantis struggled to free its back legs from the sticky web.

"Can we save it?" asked Leo. "I just like helping things. I can help

"No. It's OK, Leo," reassured Ari. "Look, it's pulling hard, it's pretty strong you know."

"Yeah," acknowledged Leo. We waited patiently for about five more minutes as the Mantis persistently pushed and pulled. Suddenly, its legs just popped out, it was free!

'Wow. That was amazing," said Juno with a look of relief on his face. Yes Juno. That was amazing.

Aboriginal Reconciliation and Cultural Day

In June, 125 K-2 students from Blakebrook, Goolmangar, Jiggi, Larnook, Caniaba Public Schools visited Coffee Camp to participate in learning about and respecting Aboriginal culture and heritage.

The day started with all students and teachers joining in on the words and actions to our Acknowledgement of Country:

"We the teachers and students here today, would like to thank the Widjabul, Wyabul people of the Bundjalung nation, for letting us share their lands.

"We promise to look after it, the waterways, the animals and the people too.

"We desire to learn together, as physical and spiritual people, with love respect and kindness to all.

"Jingi Wallah Jarjums, Jingi Wallah all".

Students were grouped into six mixed school groups and began the six activities planned for the day. Unfortunately the weather was a bit drizzly so some activities had to be indoors.

We had read the local Bundjalung creation story and students began the mural of the Goanna on the concrete in our Quiet Area.

We had a tennis coach visit to give us the finer points on playing tennis and discuss what it takes to be a champion like Evonne Goolagong – passion, skills and lots of practice.

Artist Cathy McEwan read the story of the Nimbin Rocks and students responded in crayon drawings on black paper, which looked amazing.

We had a session of Aboriginal dances involving the depiction of our native animals. There were some outstanding emus.

Dreamtime stories were read and art activities were selected to complement the

Our last activity was thanks to the generous donation from the West Community Panel of a jumping castle that was hired for us for the day. Keeping active is an important part of the school day.

Students and teachers alike all had a great day and an opportunity to learn more about traditional Aboriginal culture.

Coffee Camp students K-6 are also involved in helping Uncle Gilbert with the local story mural on the brick wall near the tennis courts. We would like to thank Uncle Gilbert Laurie for sharing his stories and art with the students and teachers at Coffee Camp Public School.

In Term 3 we are starting a Bundjalung language program across all classes at our school. More details to follow via the school website: www.coffeecamp-p.schools.nsw.

We are starting our school Kindergarten Orientation Progam in July. We have a Parent Information meeting on Thursday 9th August 3.30-5pm.

Our Orientation days for new Kindergarten enrolments in 2019 are three Fridays, 16th 23rd and 30th November. If you are interested in attending the days, please ring the school on 6689-9259 or email: coffeecamp-p.schools@det.nsw.

t Nimbin Early Learning Centre in June, we created At Nimbin Early Learning Concounting animals like giraffes, lions, zebras and many more.

We also made our own clothing that South African people may wear using different coloured patterns of bright material and collaging them onto the cardboard people we made.

Some of our children are loving playing with animals at the moment, so outside we made a dinosaur land using sand, leaves, rocks and dinosaurs in the red tub.

The older children have been enjoying the Geo Hammers, as they get to hammer objects to a board using nails to make a pattern from a picture. They also have been enjoying practising to write and recognise different letters and numbers.

Our edible garden is growing amazingly and we have been busy watering and weeding the plants.

Please feel free to call the Centre on 6689-0142. We are open Monday to Friday 8.30am-5pm.

Who do we work with?

by Russell Lean, web2traffic strategies

t is anticipated that in the near future - within five years, all Search Engine Optimisation, that which we now do, will be handled by Artificial Intelligence. However for now at least it is what we do and do well.

I was approached recently at a local cafe and asked "Are you the guy who works for Google?" Just to be clear so there are no misunderstandings - my partner and I do NOT work for Google.

We are in the Google Partners Program, we have attended Google events in Sydney and Brisbane. I am a Google Local Guide Level 8, meaning I actively work on Google Maps best practice with clients, but I am not paid by Google - I am paid by clients.

Someone else asked me recently, "So, who do you work with? What type of clients do you have?"

Our clients come from many industries and locations around Australia. At present we are working with local clients Head and Lismore - and clients in Brisbane, Sydney, and Perth.

Amongst those clients are Chambers of Commerce, real estate companies, accommodation vendors (apartment businesses and b&b's / holiday rental companies), health practitioners, garden maintenance companies, florists and organic farmers. All get great results and improve their visibility in Google.

If you are struggling with how to get found online, we offer a range of solutions for businesses including oneoff jobs where we audit the online presence including the business website and fix the issues that are holding the business back online.

Also, we have larger packages where we are retained for ongoing campaigns which guarantee first place rankings over time in Google Organic Search (the unpaid non-advertising part of search) and Google Maps.

If this seems like shameless self promotion - it is. We are passionate about what we do and have the skills after 18 years to really make a difference for clients.

A week does not go by without a call from a business which has had a website built and someone "had a crack" at Search Engine Optimising the site, with poor results. In an unregulated industry that's what you get.

So, why not get started with a business that knows the online landscape difference. That is US.

On a warm winter's afternoon, the Nimbin garden club visited the home of Nik and Andrew on Mountain Top Road.

The stunning property was purchased 11 years ago when they moved from Brisbane, Queensland. Andrew and Nick have since transformed over 25 acres of the 100 acre property. Once overgrown with lantana, the landscape has been converted to a picture of manicured lawns, footpaths framed with garden beds, pockets of orchids and native trees.

Entering the property, the driveway sweeps through a grove of gumtrees (the only established trees on the property when it was purchased) and fresh green lawn with the usual garden companions, the wallabies. Reminiscent of a nature reserve, the landscape is structured but still harmonises with the surrounding bush. Hedges of Orange Jessimine surround the house and when in bloom, their scent permeates throughout the house. The water and septic tanks are softened and disguised by the colours of Death Lilies and delicate Blue Bearded Iris.

Two Bridal Palms guard the entrance to the veranda. The house has been thoughtfully positioned to take full advantage of the outlook with lush sloping green lawns the only landscape between the house and the views. The owners are spoilt with vistas of Mount Nardi, Mount Neville, Mt Burrell and the Nimbin Rocks.

One of the lovely features of the property is the orchard of Indian guavas, pomelos, pears, apricots, peaches and nectarines as well as citrus trees ranging from grapefruits to lemons. Beyond the orchid are macadamia trees, bananas, paw paws, and passionfruit vines

The property is filled with natives such as Lillypillies, Bunya Pines, Boobialla Trees and delicate Tree Ferns. Amongst the natives are some old fashioned favourites including, Nutmeg Bushes and Variegated Iris' as well as a rose covered archway. Complementing the natives and old fashioned favourites are; Cycads, Cocos Palms, Wedlandiana, Birds' Nests, Frangipanis, Agapanthus and Happy Plants. The range of plants can be credited to the owners collecting a variety of cuttings from friends and family. Not only is this practical and affordable but also adds to the warmth and memories for the owners who recognise each of the plants as a contribution from their friends and

The striking landscape not only comprises of awe-inspiring flora but is accompanied by features such as the man-made dam. The dam is a highlight, where the lush lawn grows to the very edge of the water meeting the water lilies resting on the water's edge. The dam more so resembles a lake, with the owners using it as a swimming hole in the warmer months.

We also had our Annual General Meeting on the afternoon, and welcome Kerry Hagan to the committee, and sincerely thanked previous committee members for their valued contribution.

Our visit in July is to the home of David Warner on Sat. 21st July, from 2 – 4 pm. David's 10 acre property is at 54 Thompson Road Cawongla. He has set about transforming a bare cow paddock into a lovely property with gardens, and patches of rainforest.

by Peter Spearritt

Even though it was a cloudy day with the threat of rain, we had 16 intrepid walkers arrive at Flat Rock to start our coastal walk.

We started our walk on the new paved coastal walking track which runs to the end of Sharps Beach where it reverts back to grassy tracks. Walking over the headland to Boulder Beach gives great views from Ballina to Byron.

The walk over Boulder Beach was made a bit difficult by the volume of fresh water flowing to the beach so we took off our shoes and rock hopped to the end. We made it almost all the way to Lennox before it started to rain ever so lightly.

On arrival at Lennox we found a nice little café to warm up and dry out. After a leisurely coffee and chat we started to make our way back to Ballina. There were lots of locals out walking in Lennox and up to Pat Morton lookout, until it started to pour with rain.

We ended up being the only walkers out in the rain. By the time we were half way back to Ballina we were all soaked through (a raincoat can only do so much) and sloshing through 6 inches of water.

Despite all of this we all enjoyed our walk very much, although we were all very glad to be heading home to a hot shower and dry clothes.

Billinudgel nature reserve walk

by Megan Myers

Fourteen of us started out on a glorious Sunday morning, 24th June, from the New Brighton Café, heading for the Billinudgel nature reserve.

Local ecologist Ian Parer accompanied us, explaining the extent of the devastation of the dunes caused by sand mining, mainly in the 1940s and 1950s. The sand mining companies demolished the dunes, sieved the sand to remove the rutile, then planted the South African bitou bush – green with a yellow flower – in an effort to stabilise the dunes.

Environmental protests in the 1970s and 1980s saw significant swathes of NSW coastal land protected as nature reserves and national parks. The trouble was that the bitou bush overwhelmed the native vegetation, and for years now dedicated volunteers have been removing it from our coastline. Ian's own efforts on clearing and rehabilitating much of the dunes in this area was clearly evident and much admired.

We initially walked on a track that ran just inland from the ocean dunes, enjoying the roar of the ocean while admiring the healthy regrowth. On reaching a junction point we headed inland through a magnificent paper bark forest, reaching a clearing where the Optus Trail heads to upper Ocean Shores.

We walked back through the paper bark forest until we hit the beach, walking south, with the sun behind us. It was a very pleasant walk back to be rewarded with a well-earned coffee at the Yum Yum Café at New Brighton.

Over Pruning

My wife asked me to prune the garden. I gave it my best, only to be yelled at for over-doing it. What the?

- Bruce Champion, Tumbulgum

normanappel@westnet.com.au Send your relationship problems to Norm and Maj

She says

It's a man thing, you go hard or go home. I imagine when you get out the big secateurs, or worse, start up your chainsaw, the testosterone kicks in, and beware anything that gets in the way. I'm sure there's a bit of "if I do it really hard now, I won't have to do it again for ages, or better still, the plants will die." Your yard ends up looking like the Russian army has been through – and back again. As your wife knows, it will take years to recover, if ever.

I have heard many women complain about this. It's tricky because he was proudly doing what was asked of him and thought it was a good job. Not a bushy bush in sight. Not so long ago in our history, slashing the countryside and taking no prisoners was considered a good manly pursuit.

I learnt early on to prune judiciously. I cut back a big fern at my family home only to be screamed at by my mother that it was a slow-growing plant and had taken 100 years to get that big. It would never grow to that size again in my mother's lifetime, or even mine.

These gardening mistakes can make your wife angry with you every time she goes outside. It is best to hire someone who knows about plants and has a good sense of aesthetics.

*A word of warning. If Uncle Norm tells you he knows anything about gardening, don't believe him. He is an urban Jew and only extends himself to mowing and whipper snipping. Strangely, one of his favourite shows is Gardening Australia. I ask him why he likes it so much when he doesn't like to garden himself and he tells me that watching this show always makes him feel peaceful and happy. Bruce, that's how your wife used to feel when looking at her garden!

"If you have a garden and a library, you have everything you need." – Cicero

He says

Dear Bruce, when I was a young buck, and I finished school, I did what any ambitious self-motivated lad would do, and applied for the dole. To my dismay I was sent to work for a wealthy matron in one of Sydney's blue-blooded harbourside suburbs. She required someone to weed her garden, something I had never done before, and haven't done since.

After two whole hours of back-breaking labour, I was summarily dismissed. It seems I pulled out most of her shrubs and bulbs and left most of the weeds. I couldn't tell the difference and still can't. The only plants I recognise are the ones I can smoke. It would have been far better if the dole office had sent me for a job playing piano in a strip joint, something I was far better suited to, and could possibly have led to full-time employment.

Don't get me wrong, I like gardens. There's nothing more pleasant and soothing to the soul (besides good music) than to be meandering through a beautiful garden. So long as it is the result of someone else's hard yakka. I don't mind mowing and brush cutting, which is all I'm trusted with in our garden. I like using loud, stinky machines. Hell, I'm loud and stinky all the time anyway.

Alas, us geezers just can't help ourselves. Look at the job we've done on the world's ancient rainforests. A slight case of overpruning there, you'd have to say.

My little lumberjack has her own tendencies to over-prune, but it's on me rather than the garden that she exacts her toll. She insists on being my hairdresser and beautician. She chops, trims and yes, prunes every overgrown surface and orifice on my body, from head to toe, until she has me looking like a tax accountant rather than the rakish old hipster I perceive myself to be.

But enough about me. The solution here is very simple. Always insist that your wife be present when she asks you to prune, and to supervise you so as to avoid recrimination after the fact. If she couldn't be bothered to help you, tell her to give Centrelink a call. Do you want a brief explanation of an acorn? In a nutshell, it's an oak tree.

aking judgements is normal and happens all the time but often we don't realize that we have the power to use this facility – for good or bad.

Judgement gets a lot of bad press because when we make a negative or harsh judgement, we feel bad. Judgements work instantaneously. As soon as you judge, that instructs you on the way to proceed, whether negative of positive. As new information, experiences and people come into our lives, we are influenced and expanded. We must drop old judgements that no longer serve us. The less attached we are to our judgements and greater willingness to change, the quicker we expand our consciousness.

If you are confused or lost, tune into Judgement by sitting quietly, and asking to bring light to your perfect direction. This is done through your mind, however the answer comes through your feeling body. If you ask a yes/no question, it comes through as a strong feeling. In listening for guidance, judgement helps us discern, evaluate, and make decisions.

Conversely, I recently acknowledged long-held wounds from being judged harshly and forgave those people. A weight lifted from my heart. I started noticing when I judged others negatively, and decided to change my mind about them. This released them from my consciousness.

What a relief! I met my friend's new boyfriend, and immediately didn't like him. That judgement made me feel sad as I thought of the ramifications that had to our friendship. So I decided to suspend my judgement and give him a fair go. Instantly I was happy again. "Ah," I thought (lightbulb moment), "this awareness changes my life!"

Good judgements inspire, guide, and show us the way. We just need to take time to tune in to Divine Judgement and have faith to trust it.
